SECTION 4. TERMS OF REFERENCE

Project Title	Digital and Financial Capability Training for BISP Beneficiaries
Programme	Karandaaz Digital - Supporting G2P Digitization in Pakistan
Expected Start Date	TBD
Expected End Date	TBD
EOI Reference No.	27 (Digital and Financial Capability Training for BISP Beneficiaries)

About Karandaaz Pakistan

Karandaaz Pakistan is a not-for-profit company established in 2014 and registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission of Pakistan (SECP) under Section 42 of the Companies Act, 2017. Karandaaz Pakistan promotes access to finance for micro, small, and medium enterprises (MSMEs) and advances financial inclusion for individuals by leveraging technology-enabled solutions and platforms. Karandaaz Pakistan operates across multiple program verticals including Karandaaz Capital, Karandaaz Digital, Karandaaz Innovation, and Karandaaz Research & Insights.

Its founding was supported by a seed grant from the UK Government's Foreign, Commonwealth & Development Office (FCDO), and subsequent support for its digital financial services work is provided through grants, including from the Gates Foundation.

Karandaaz Digital focuses on expanding access to digital financial services in Pakistan by working closely with regulators, policymakers, government entities, financial service providers, and ecosystem stakeholders across policy and regulation, experimentation, solutions development, and scale-up.

2. Project Context

The shift to Raast-enabled, account-based disbursements under the Benazir Income Support Programme ("BISP") represents more than a change in payment rail it is a structural transition from cash access to genuine financial participation. While full-mandate accounts remove the supply-side constraints inherent in Limited Mandate Accounts (LMAs), they do not automatically translate into meaningful usage or empowerment. Without deliberate investment in digital and financial capability, there is a high risk that BISP beneficiaries continue to exhibit "cash-out only" behaviour, effectively replicating the limitations of the current system on new infrastructure.

Women receiving payments into their own accounts, and operating SIMs and mobile wallets registered to their CNICs, are being positioned as independent financial actors for the first time. Evidence from Pakistan and comparable markets shows that first-generation users, particularly low-income women, face barriers including low functional literacy, limited familiarity with digital interfaces, trust deficits in formal financial systems, and socio-cultural constraints on independent financial decision-making. In this context, access without capability can lead to dormancy, agent dependency, or exclusion.

To support BISP in ensuring an effective transition, Karandaaz Pakistan is engaging an experienced firm (or consortium/joint venture) to design and implement a nationwide Digital and Financial Capability

Building programme to build beneficiaries', particularly women's, digital readiness and confidence to navigate the digital financial system.

3. Scope of Services

The successful bidder will be responsible for the end-to-end design, adaptive implementation, and continuous reporting of the training program to prepare BISP beneficiaries for digital accounts usage.

Component	Key Responsibilities
Diagnostic, Curriculum Design & Capacity Building	- Conduct a rapid baseline assessment to evaluate beneficiaries' digital and financial capabilities, transaction behaviours, gender-related constraints (mobility, trust, household dynamics), device access, and digital connectivity conditions - to inform the appropriate blended training modality mix. - Segment beneficiaries into actionable groups to inform training design and differentiated channel deployment. - Develop a task-based, action-oriented curriculum focused on high-impact behaviours (e.g., receiving payments, PIN use, safe cash-out, fraud awareness, grievance redressal). - Localize content across languages, literacy levels, and geographies using visual and audio formats. - Design a full blended content package covering both physical and digital channels, including: facilitator and trainer guides, participant booklets and job aids, printed flyers, demonstration toolkits (physical); and IVR scripts, SMS nudge sequences, short instructional videos, digital media awareness materials, and e-guide versions (digital). All content must be approved by Karandaaz and BISP prior to deployment. - Integrate gender-intentional content (women's financial rights, device sharing, fraud targeting women, navigating household dynamics) across all content types and channels. - Design and deliver a Training of Trainers (ToT) program for at least 1200 of BISP master trainers, including equipping trainers to facilitate both in-person sessions and to support beneficiaries in engaging with digital content. - Incorporate a peer educator model to support last-mile learning and confidence building.
Roll-Out Planning & Go to Market Strategy	- Develop a comprehensive go-to-market and implementation strategy for the nationwide rollout of the training program. The GTM plan should include a phased regional rollout approach, prioritization methodology for beneficiary cohorts, and alignment with BISP payment cycles and field operations. It should clearly define the beneficiary outreach and engagement strategy, including approaches for reaching low-literacy, low-confidence, and first-time digital users through community-based mobilization and trust-building mechanisms. - The strategy must include a dedicated Blended Training Deployment Plan (in accordance with sub-section 3A of this Section 4) that: (i) proposes and justifies the physical-to-digital modality split appropriate to each beneficiary segment and geography; (ii) maps training content to delivery channel and (iii) sequences in-person and digital touchpoints across the full beneficiary journey from mobilization through to sustained usage. The plan must demonstrate technical feasibility given prevailing connectivity and device access conditions, and include contingency approaches where digital delivery is constrained. - The strategy should also detail the proposed training deployment model, including trainer allocation, field coordination mechanisms, training schedules, venue planning, onboarding support arrangements, and integration with payment touchpoints where feasible. In addition, the firm should outline behavioral reinforcement mechanisms intended to encourage continued and safe usage of digital financial services beyond initial onboarding, spanning both digital channels and community-based channels. - The GTM plan must demonstrate operational feasibility at scale and include quality assurance processes, implementation governance structures, reporting protocols, and mitigation measures for risks related to attendance, connectivity, mobility constraints, literacy barriers, and socio-cultural limitations affecting women beneficiaries.

Field Implementation, Beneficiary Training & Behavioural Reinforcement	- Deliver structured training to one million beneficiaries in coordination with BISP field teams and distribution of toolkits. - Deploy digital content in coordination with in-person sessions: screen and distribute short instructional videos at training venues; trigger IVR calls and SMS nudges immediately post-training to reinforce learning; and share digital job aids via trainer devices or WhatsApp networks where connectivity permits. Integrate training with payment touchpoints where feasible. - Support basic onboarding readiness (e.g., SIM checks, assisted transactions). - Implement a sequenced behavioural reinforcement program spanning both digital (SMS/IVR nudges, video reminders, digital media) and community-based channels (peer educators, printed flyers, agent touchpoints), calibrated to beneficiary device access and literacy levels.

Monitoring, Reporting & Endline Assessment	- Conduct baseline and endline assessments measuring beneficiaries' ability to perform key tasks, using an indicator framework proposed by the firm. - Track training quality, participation, and coverage across both physical and digital delivery channels, including classroom attendance and digital reach and engagement metrics. - Measure behavioural outcomes (e.g., transaction completion, reduced reliance on intermediaries, repeat usage) to the extent data-sharing arrangements with BISP/financial institutions permit. - Establish feedback loops to refine curriculum, content formats, and channel deployment across phases. - Provide regular progress reporting and a final evaluation with evidence-based recommendations for national scale-up, including guidance on optimal blended deployment models. All reporting will feed into the independent third-party MEL process; the firm is not responsible for independent outcome verification.

3A. Blended Training Deployment Strategy

Effective delivery of the Digital and Financial Capability Building program at scale requires a smart designed blended deployment approach that combines in-person, classroom-based training with digital and technology-enabled methods. Given the diversity of BISP's beneficiary base - spanning varying literacy levels, geographic locations, digital exposure, and access to devices - a single delivery modality will not be sufficient to ensure inclusive reach, knowledge retention, and behavioural change.

The selected bidder must therefore propose a context-appropriate blended training model that integrates physical and digital delivery channels in proportions suited to the beneficiary segment. The deployment strategy should be designed around the principle of "reach through digital, reinforce through human" - using digital tools to extend geographic coverage and sustain engagement, while retaining face-to-face instruction for foundational skill-building and hands-on practice.

Objectives of the Blended Deployment Strategy

- Maximize geographic reach and beneficiary coverage across urban, peri-urban, and remote rural areas where in-person access is constrained.
- Ensure foundational skill-building for low-literacy, first-time digital users through hands-on, in-person instruction where it is most needed.
- Sustain behavioural reinforcement beyond the initial training session through digital follow-up mechanisms tailored to beneficiary device access and literacy levels.
- Build institutional capacity through a Training of Trainers (ToT) model that leverages digital tools for cascaded, cost-effective delivery at scale.

Proposed Delivery Mix: Physical vs. Digital

Given the low-literacy profile of BISP beneficiaries, their limited prior exposure to digital tools, and the foundational nature of the skills being imparted, the program's delivery mix should be weighted toward in-person instruction. The proposed indicative split is as follows:

Modality	Indicative Share	Rationale
Physical / Classroom (In-Person)	~65–70%	Core skill-building, hands-on practice, and trust-building require direct human interaction. Essential for first-time digital users and low-literacy beneficiaries who need guided repetition and immediate feedback.
Digital / Technology-Enabled	~30–35%	Used for reach extension, pre-training awareness, post-training reinforcement, and supplementary engagement. Appropriate for beneficiaries with basic phone access and where digital content can be delivered via IVR, SMS, or shared community viewing.

The exact modality split must be proposed by bidders based on their baseline assessment findings, the geographic profile of target cohorts, and available digital infrastructure. Firms are encouraged to propose differentiated splits for distinct beneficiary segments (e.g., urban vs. remote rural) where justified by evidence.

Training Content by Channel

The firm must develop and deploy a suite of training content across both physical and digital channels. Content must be designed for low-literacy audiences using visual, audio, and task-based formats, and appropriately localized by language, dialect, and geography. The following content types are expected across each channel:

A. Physical / Classroom Channel Content

- Facilitator / Trainer Guides: Structured session plans with learning objectives, step-by-step facilitation instructions, demonstration scripts, and tips for managing low-literacy groups. Available in Urdu and relevant regional languages.
- Participant Booklets / Job Aids: Simplified, picture-based take-home reference materials covering key tasks (PIN use, SIM registration, cash withdrawal, balance check, fraud awareness). Designed for minimal-literacy users with iconography and visual step-by-step sequences.
- Printed Flyers: Single-page awareness and reminder materials distributed at training venues and BISP payment points. Content to cover BISP digital account benefits, fraud warning signs, and grievance redressal steps. Produced in high-contrast, large-font, visual formats.
- Training of Trainers (ToT) Materials: A dedicated package for the BISP master trainers, including adult learning methodology guides, facilitation competency checklists, quality assurance observation tools, and trainer certification criteria. The firm's proposal must ensure training and certification of at least 1,200 BISP master trainers, consistent with the minimum threshold set out in the Success Measurement criteria in this TOR; the firm may propose a higher number based on its assessed need.
- Demonstration Toolkits: Physical props and mock transaction aids (e.g., dummy SIM cards, printed wallet interface cards, demo transaction flow charts) for use in classroom demonstrations where live devices may not be available for all participants.

B. Digital / Technology-Enabled Channel Content

- IVR (Interactive Voice Response) Messages: Pre-recorded voice messages in local languages delivered via outbound IVR calls or integrated with the BISP helpline. Content to include payment notifications, PIN safety reminders, fraud alerts, and prompts to complete initial transactions. Optimised for basic handsets without smartphone dependency.
- SMS Nudges and Reminders: Short, Urdu-language SMS messages sent at key behavioral moments (post-training, pre-payment cycle, post-disbursement) to reinforce learning, prompt action, and reduce dormancy. Messages to cover transaction reminders, safety tips, and grievance redressal information.
- Short Instructional Videos: Brief animated or live-action videos demonstrating core tasks step-by-step (e.g., checking balance, completing a withdrawal, reporting fraud). Designed for community group viewing on shared smartphones, projected at training venues, or shared via WhatsApp group networks where applicable. Videos to be produced in Urdu and key regional languages.
- Digital Media and Social Awareness Content: Short-form content (infographics, audio clips, short video reels) for dissemination through digital media channels including WhatsApp community groups, YouTube, and radio. Content to raise awareness of the BISP digital account program and reinforce key safety messages at a population level.
- Digital Training Guides (e-Versions): Electronic versions of the participant booklets and facilitator guides formatted for distribution via mobile devices or tablets used by field trainers. These support offline use in low-connectivity environments and reduce the print burden at scale.

Integration, Sequencing, and Quality Requirements

- The blended model must be sequenced coherently: digital awareness content (IVR, SMS, video) should precede or accompany in-person sessions to prime beneficiaries, with digital reinforcement mechanisms activated immediately after classroom training to sustain momentum.
- All content — physical and digital — must be reviewed and approved by Karandaaz and BISP before deployment. The firm must submit a content matrix mapping each content type to the relevant learning objective, target beneficiary segment, channel, and deployment timeline.
- The firm must demonstrate that the proposed blended model is technically feasible given prevailing connectivity, device access, and literacy conditions across the target geographies, and must include contingency approaches where digital delivery is constrained.
- The technical proposal must include a dedicated section articulating the blended deployment strategy, with clear justification of the proposed modality split, a channel-by-channel content plan, and a sequencing map illustrating how physical and digital touchpoints interact across the beneficiary journey from mobilization through to sustained usage.

4. Success Measurements
